Mr. Fred Sheible, late of the Fredericktown Plaindealer, left that place last week for Hillsboro, where he will go to work on the Democrat. His family will remain in Fredericktown for a while.

laid, which we regret very much. From nine A. M. until 12, and from 1 P. M. until 4, the streets are deserted of rising humanity. But it makes itself doubly apparent at the other daylit hours: instead of being scattered over all the day, this bubbling, noisy element is bottled up, as it were, to effervesce at intervals. Telephonic communication has been established between the Company's office at Pilot Knob and Shepherd Mountain, and also with the tunnels on the Knob. This will save many a weary footstep for the bosses and employes. An underground speaking trumpet unites the store with the Superintendent's

To the Patrons of the Ironton Public School. FRIENDS-Your teachers desire to bring the best possible results out of the next term of your school. I desire to impress upon your minds the fact that the work is preeminently yours as well as mine and the other teachers'. Though we shall spare no pains or exertions to make your school one of which you may be justly proud, our efforts will, in a measure, be thwarted, unless we have it word and work your hearty co-operation Miss Anna Garvins, of St. Louis, who has Without it we cannot wholly succeed.

While's faithful teacher must perform a ibors, you may secure as of those labors such a grand success as will surprise you, simply by giving us three things, viz: first, your regular and faithful patronage; second, your co-operation and influence at home among your children; libird, your encouraging presence and smiles in the school-room.

We ask and expect you to encourage your children to punctuality and regularity of attendance. Every day the child loses from school is a link dropped from the chain of knowledge. The child who is absent half its time will not learn half so much as the one who attends regularly. We necessarily fall just in the ratio that you fail in your first duty. Your influence at home is worth much more than you imagine it to be. Encourage your children by precept and example to obey and respect their teachers and to study at home. By no means permit them to loaf or play on the streets of mornings and evenings. This is your duty. Never speak ill of your teacher in the presence of your children, even if you think ill. If you have aught against us at any time come to us with it first. Come with your grievances to the among your neighbors and children about the faults you think your teacher guilty of without giving him a hearing.

Finally, no one knows so well as the faithful teacher how much good is done by the friendly visits to the school of parents and friends. It encourages teacher and pupil. It shows them that you feel an interest in them and inspires them to renewed efforts to make a worthy return for your manifested interest.

Friends, think of these things and be ready to do your part of the work with cheerful vigor. Do not forget us and your children as we labor together daily.

Very respectfully, C. S. EBAUGH.
